

Foreword	9
Acknowledgements	13
Introduction	15
What Is Interesting about Boredom?	18
Defining a Slippery Corpus	19
Two Approaches and Three Authors	20
Part One: The Relationship between Comics and Everyday Life and Boredom
Chapter One. A Brief History of Boredom	27
Boredom and Modernity: New Words for a New Feeling	30
Avoiding or Enduring Boredom?	37
Heidegger and the Phenomenology of Boredom	39
Benjamin and the Atrophy of Experience	42
Chapter Two. Boredom and the Everyday in Comics	45
Keeping Boredom Away	46
Gag a Day: Repetition and Variation in Comic Strips	46
Escaping Tediousness: Super-hero Comic Books and BDs	48
From Underground Comix to Alternative Comics	49
In Praise of the Loser	52
Gender and Boredom in Alternative Comics	54
The Joy and the Burden of the Comics Artist	55
Chapter Three. Four Approaches Towards the Everyday	61
Grasping the Everyday	62
Observational Humour	63
Derisive Humour	66
Ennui	68
Contemplation	70
Part Two: The Ambiguity of Boredom in Terms of an Aesthetic Phenomenon
Chapter Four. The Poetics of Boredom	79
A Dynamics of Boredom and Interest	80
The Paradox of Boredom	82
A Plea for Attention	84
Slowness and Speed	85
Repetition and Variation	91
Minimalism and Excess	97
On Gestures and Facial Expressions	103
Part Three: The Narratological Perspective of the Dialectics of Boredom
Chapter Five. Boredom as a Narratological Concept	109
Uneventful Eventfulness	110
And So What? Tellability and the 'Point' of the Story	112
On Boredom and Narrative Tension	114
Chapter Six. What Happens When Nothing Happens	123
Linearity and Tabularity in Narrative Tension	123
Defying the Cliffhanger	125
Open-Ended Everyday and Diary Comics	127
When Suspense Is Suspended	129
Expectation Becomes the Event	134
Eventfulness: Too Much or Too Little?	136

Part Four: Focus on the Works of Lewis Trondheim, Chris Ware and Adrian Tomine

Chapter Seven. The Little Nothings of Lewis Trondheim	143
Minimalism, Constraints and Repetition	144
Rabbits and Dungeons in a Neo-Baroque Farce	147
The Drama of Having Nothing to Tell	149
Chapter Eight. Adrian Tomine: Lost Gazes, Detached Minds	157
From Mini-Comics to Graphic Novels and Back to Floppies	159
In Praise of Apathy in the Name of Honesty	160
Graphic Transparency and Linear Reading	162
Reticent Endings and Suspended Gaze	165
Chapter Nine. Chris Ware: Resisting Narrative Immersion	173
Against Immersion	174
Temporal Immersion: In Defence of Slow Reading	175
Emotional Immersion: Clear Line and Graphic Empathy	177
Spatial Immersion: Playing with Page Layout	178
(Un)eventfulness in Building Stories	181
Against Distraction	191
Conclusion	195
Notes	197
Works Cited	205
Bibliography	209